
Line 6 Model Packs Cracked.

Jan 29, 2015 I'm stuck with a defective Model Pack on my HD500X and I wanna know what I can do to get the pack working.

A: I believe that the Model Packs worked the same as the Studio Packs (before they were re-branded as Collector Classics and FX Junkie) where you buy the model which you want with the necessary parts and then have it all sent together. I believe the Hd500X would have been sent as a pair, one with the head and the other without. The Studio Packs were a time saving way of doing that (although admittedly with the downside that you couldn't select which model you wanted). And also as an aside, I don't believe you get that Live Series "octave doubling" effect. I believe you can get that with a Variac and the Variac trick on the Octone. And I believe the Roland JC120 is what is used on the VersaTube. I've used that sound before and I think that's what you'll find on there. But you'll have to get your hands on a Voight V18 so you can swap the POD Head with a Variac and "turn up" the signal.

Q: Best Thread Schematic for 'Stringify + PUT Request' I'm trying to build a service that will allow a client to stringify their data (into a string, while converting any JSON objects) and send that string via a PUT request to an endpoint. My initial idea was: Create a thread to run on from an RTServer. Create a thread to run on from an RTServer which will use the thread above to stringify the data it receives (which will be sent as a string) and send it via a PUT request. However, I was wondering if this is the best approach, and if not, what would be better.

A: It's ok. If you want to create thread per request, you can create a factory and pass it to each client. PUT is a single request to the server, so thread can safely do the job. But if you need to speed up throughput, use asynchronous task, it will be faster and even more easier to implement.

Q: How to avoid Unpacking the tuple when the value is already unpacked? Is there a way to make this code a little more concise:
